EXAMINER'S AMENDMENT

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

1. Statement of Reasons for Allowance

The Board decision dated March 23, 2006 clearly interprets claim 14, the sole independent claim, as positively reciting a processor being in selective communication with both a customer client and a supplier client and in operable communication with a storefront database as recited in claim 14. Muhme fails to disclose such a three way arrangement coupled by a common processor. In addition, the Board decision further reads as a positive limitation, the preamble phrase "adapted to manage transfer of parts stored in a secure area by a supplier to a customer via a computer network". Thus, the system of claim 14 further requires parts be stored in a secured area by the supplier and transferred to a customer and that this transfer be managed by the data processing system. Because Muhme does not disclose customer and supplier clients coupled by a common processor, it fails to meet this limitation. The Board decision goes further to highlight the limitation of the program instructions "receiving secure area part reception information from the customer client via the computer network" as a limitation which is positively recited and which limitation cannot be met by Muhme because the Board did not find disclosed separate customer and supplier clients, and hence no part reception information from a customer client could exist.

US: Muhme, US 5886634, neither discloses or suggests the combination of elements interpreted a positive recitations by the Boards decision dated March 23, 2006. information from the customer client via the computer network" as a limitation which is positively recited and which limitation cannot be met by Muhme because the Board did not find disclosed separate customer and supplier clients, and hence no part reception information from a customer client could exist.

Foreign: GB 2214673 discloses a secure area device which tracks the item to which it is attached, but does not disclose or suggest the combination of elements of claim 14, the sole independent claim, as positively reciting a processor being in selective communication with both a customer client and a supplier client and in operable communication with a storefront database as recited in claim 14. GB' 673 fails to disclose such a three-way arrangement coupled by the processor. In addition, the Board decision further reads as a positive limitation, the preamble phrase "adapted to manage transfer of parts stored in a secure area by a supplier to a customer via a computer network". Thus, the system of claim 14 further requires parts be stored in a secured area by the supplier and transferred to a customer and that this transfer is managed by the data processing system. Because GB'673 does not disclose a customer and supplier clients coupled by a common processor, it fails to meet this limitation. The Board decision goes further to highlight the limitation of the program instructions "receiving secure area part reception information from the customer client via the computer network" as a limitation which is positively recited and which limitation cannot be met by GB'673 because the Board did not find disclosed separate customer and supplier clients, and hence no part reception information from a customer client could exist.

NPL: “-ITS” discloses a customer supplier networking system but does not disclose or suggest the combination of elements of claim 14, the sole independent claim, as positively reciting a processor being in selective communication with both a customer client and a supplier client and in operable communication with a storefront database as recited in claim 14. “-ITS” fails to disclose a storefront three-way arrangement coupled by the processor. In addition, the Board decision further reads as a positive limitation, the preamble phrase “adapted to manage transfer of parts stored in a secure area by a supplier to a customer via a computer network”. Thus, the system of claim 14 further requires parts be stored in a secured area by the supplier and transferred to a customer and that this transfer is managed by the data processing system. Because “-ITS” does not disclose a secured area parts feature, it fails to meet this limitation. The Board decision goes further to highlight the limitation of the program instructions “receiving secure area part reception information from the customer client via the computer network” as a limitation which is positively recited and which limitation cannot be met by “-ITS” because “-ITS” does not disclose a secured area feature.
